Thank you, just thank you so much, those parents are afraid of what they don't know, but you guys know and aren't afraid.

Thank you for standing up for our rights. It makes me so proud to be a part of such an amazing community!

To the #1MillionMarch4Children Protestors, this is how we feel...

I don't blame them for how they feel, I blame them for not learning & not accepting that things change.

It scares me, to see my country, one of multiculturalism, and diversity, making choices that resemble what's happening in the U.S. I'm lucky that my parents support me, though confused, they want to understand, but many kids parents would rather disown them or send them to conversion therapy (proven to cause trauma). I fear for my safety and the safety and lives of my friends.

Do I not deserve rights? Educate. Don't Discriminate.

It makes me feel uncomfortable and sad that parents would protest against their children's wants and needs with the SOGI policy and GSAs.

I'm scared by the protestors, it makes me feel really unsafe. We're always fought for our existence, but never would I have thought the people who were supposed to make us feel safe, would ever make me feel so terrified.

2SLGBTQIA+ rights are human rights and ALL children should feel supported in any environment and I will never understand people who don't believe in that.

It feels like parents would do anything for their kids BUT let them be themselves.

It breaks my heart that parents (the people that are supposed to be advocating for kids) feel like I shouldn't exist. My heart goes out to those parent's kids. I hope they're safe.
